What a great High Seas Adventure we had for VBS! West End reached 60 kids and planted the seeds of God's word into the tender hearts of those children. We are fulfilling God's mission to share our faith with others.

Thank you to everyone who willingly participated to make VBS a success. SanDee Moore and crew aboard the ship, JOB WELL DONE! Until next year!

Get your bags packed because it is almost time to load the bus to leave for Eagle Eyrie for Centri-Kid.

As we go, please keep our campers in prayer, Kaleigh & Seth Moore, Chloe Lambert, Madison Lewis, Ann Cable, Anna Schmidt, and Seth's friend.

Also keep our adult leaders in prayer, SanDee Moore and Carol McCann.

The History of Praise and Worship, Part 3.

In the late 1960's an exciting, spontaneous musical movement was beginning to emerge within the communal Jesus houses in Costa Mesa, Huntington Beach, and Riverside. People were making up new songs all the time— songs that were not chained to the traditional conventions of hymnody. Some even went so far as to write gospel lyrics “to things like Coca Cola commercials.” By June 1968, guitars were making regular appearances in many services, along with some of the songs grown in the communes.

The impact of musical innovation has continued to reverberate throughout the evangelical church. Hundreds of grassroots troubadours evolved into professional songwriters and “worship leaders.” The Vineyard movement and old-line religious music publishers joined Marnatha! In creating their own praise and worship publishing entities. Seminars and worship workshops dotted the landscape, and many churches across the continent replaced hymn-books with overhead projectors and— by the 1990s— big screen video projectors.

But the change has not come without a fight: “Worship Wars” have become a fact of life as traditionalists battle champions of the new music, often resulting in separate worship services or the uneasy compromise of “blended worship.” As the debris has begun to settle and as generations have waxed and waned, it is clear that Protestant musical expression has irrevocably changed. While organs still intone “A Mighty Fortress” and congregations continue to sing just one more stanza of “Power in the Blood,” a new set of “standards” such as “He is Exalted” and “Shout to the Lord”— led by “Worship teams” wielding guitars and electric keyboards—have joined the ancient call to worship.
